

Cybergun's successful legal defense of its intellectual property rights

Cybergun, the world leader in recreational shooting, has won important victories in its fight for the intellectual property rights of its brand portfolio.

The Group has recently won cases against the following companies:

- Italy: Pamax Import S.R.L, ELLEENNE S.R.L and Fashion Soft Air for counterfeit Cybergun models and brands;
- Switzerland and France: Hexis Energy, Itex and Vinista for the sale of a "Kalashnikow" drink and the fraudulent registration of domain names containing "Kalashnikow";
- France: Europe Accessoires.

In each case, the amount of the fine and/or damages is over €10,000. In the case against Europe Accessoires, the amount is set at €1,180 for each replica. The court rulings are often accompanied with penalties, up to €1,000 per product and €3,000 per day of violation.

Cybergun is one of the world leaders in recreational shooting boasting around twenty exclusive operational licenses for the best known recreational shooting brands and models such as Colt, Smith & Wesson, Kalashnikov, FN Herstal, Famas, Sig Sauer and more. Cybergun also owns around 200 brand names including "Swissarms".

Cybergun has led several legal actions against counterfeiting in Asia, America and Europe (France, Spain, Slovenia, United Kingdom, Belgium, German, Italy and more).

Today more than ever before, Cybergun is defending its intellectual property and unique portfolio of world famous brands, putting experience and high quality patented products at the service of recreational shooting.

Through these actions, Cybergun is promoting the value of its partner brands.
